WORLD AND ORIGIN

Werewolves bridge the gap between the monster and human world as they can live in both, but are ostracized from both. Werewolves have full control over their human and werewolf form, they can transform whenever they please, however during the day they are weaker and during full moons they have no choice and are forced into their werewolf form. Females are rare as they are much smaller than the males and are often preyed upon by human werewolf hunters and opportunistic monsters.

The Doctor was once a werewolf hunter, Joseph was his competition. The Doctor killed the males quick but enjoyed torturing the females, often experimenting on them as the females were smaller than the males. He harvested organs and started experiments as he was an anatomy doctor and was curious. One day he tracks down a mating pair, he accidentally kills the female too soon and the male gets away. He takes the female back with him. The male werewolf takes revenge on the doctor by killing the doctor's wife and daughter. The doctor goes mad. Butchers the female werewolf and harvests her eggs and fetus. The doctor goes mad. Butchers the female werewolf and harvests her eggs and fetus.

He starts experimenting with human male genes, werewolf female genes and cells from the fetus. After continues failures he gets a break-through after a mutation causes a female werewolf to have male alpha instincts, the specimen is essentially both the doctor's and the missing male werewolf's daughter. Before Leben's birth the Doctor gathers as many monster hunters as he can and sets out to kill any and all female werewolves to the point where one hadn't been sighted over nine months leading up to Leben's birth.

LOGLINE & SYNOPSIS

"In 1800's England a naive werewolf with alpha genes is created in an obsessed doctor's lab. Born as an adult, she wrestles with ladylike pressures contrasting her deepest werewolf instincts."

LEBEN screams in excruciating pain as her body contorts and stretches into her werewolf form. The DOCTOR, the man who raised her with kindness, pulls violently on the chain around her neck, causing her pain. He whispers in her ear, "I'm doing this because I love you, you need to stay with me."

Suddenly Leben wakes up with a gasp, no longer in the laboratory where she was born, but in her bedroom in the Doctor's manor. She clearly hears the carts and horse drawn carriages on the busy streets of 1800 London. She takes a deep breath, knowing the Doctor wouldn't do anything to hurt her. He loves her as a daughter.

The door! She hears it open along with the charming and sweet voice of ROGER DICKENS. She wastes no time and rushes down the stairs in her nightgown. Roger smiles widely as her presence fills the room. His father, JOSEPH DICKENS and head of law enforcement, accompanies Roger. Roger takes her into his arms, but Joseph coughs to make his presence known, "young lady you shouldn't prance around guests in your sleepwear, change so we might get going into the city."

She hurries upstairs with PENELOPE and KATHRINE, her maids, trailing behind her. They are quick to dress her in her room with fine fabric and expensive jewels. The maids tease Leben about the handsome Roger, Leben doesn't deny his charming charismatics. They laugh, however Leben is suddenly drawn to the window.

She opens the window to take in the fresh morning air, but there is a scent that calls out to her werewolf side. Little does she know, BONES and LUCE are on the prowl, the pair of werewolf males have no idea how much Leben will change their lives. Her instincts tell her to seek them out, but she knows that the Doctor never raised a lady like her to blindly indulge her werewolf side. The again... she was never the obeying type.

Leben

Leben is born as an adult female werewolf with alpha instincts. She relies on the Doctor to teach, feed, clothe and care for her because the Doctor is all she has ever know. She learns skills very quickly and she is drawn to new things, especially new smells, which leads her meeting Joseph, Roger, Bones and Luce. She is very naïve as she knows nothing of the city life and she can be overly trusting and affectionate towards strangers, and that often finds herself in uncomfortable situations. Leben is tricked into believing that she has no control over her werewolf form as she retains no memory, however as the season progresses, she learns that not only does she have full control in her werewolf form, but she is also frighteningly large for a female werewolf. Leben frequently questions her existence and why she is the way she is and due to being born as an adult she struggles to control her emotions, her curiousness is her way of searching and finding out new things about herself for example what she likes, what she dislikes and what makes her happy, sad and/or angry. Leben, for the majority of season one, is on a search of self-discovery.

Godwin Wollstonecraft

Godwin Wollstonecraft, the Doctor, specialist in anatomy, scientist and retired werewolf hunter. After his wife and daughter were murdered by a male werewolf, avenging the slaughter of his mate, the Doctor creates Leben in his laboratory not only to fill the void of a lost loved one, but also to have her strong enough to triumph over any male werewolf. He envisions all werewolves to fear and listen to Leben, which indirectly gives him a large amount of power. The Doctor often struggles to differentiate Leben as his daughter and Leben as a tool for his revenge on all werewolves. He also struggles understand his own fear, the fear of Leben abandoning him and the fear that she, one day, will kill him. The Doctor always goes out of his way to protect Leben and lets her often do what makes her happy, however he is not above making decisions for her, outright or through manipulation. The Doctor always believes that he has the upper-hand and is in full control of whatever situation he finds himself in, however as the first season progresses the Doctor seems to slowly realise that he can't control everything around him which ultimately leads to his downfall in the last episode.

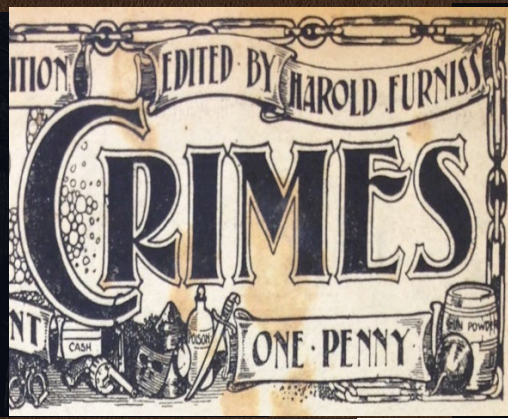

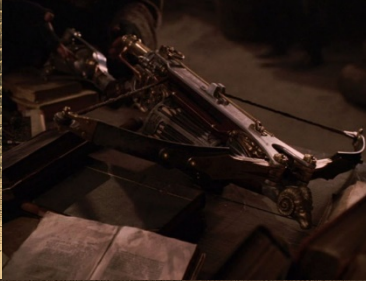

Bones

The city's streets are the territory of Bones and Luce, Bones's brother. Bones roams the streets mostly as a dirty scavenger, but despite his appearance he is a powerful werewolf. He has full control of his werewolf form, he is very intelligent, thus why he is in charge and why Luce listens to him. Bones trusts only his brother, but he is secretly lonely, wondering the streets with only his brother has grown draining over the years. Bones is curious about humans yet claims to never be involved with them and doesn't kill a human unless absolutely necessary. Leben's presence causes Bones to be drawn to her, as she is a new werewolf and a female. He goes out of his way to help her, even though she is not part of his pack. His desire for companionship causes a rift between him and his brother. Since birth the brothers were inseparable, however Leben being involved with the two strains their relationship to the point where Leben separates them then forces them together again in her own pack. Bones originally viewed Leben as a weak puppy who needed guidance and soon learns that she is smarter and stronger than him, and he respects her for that, no longer seeing her as a weak female, but as a strong pack leader.

Luce

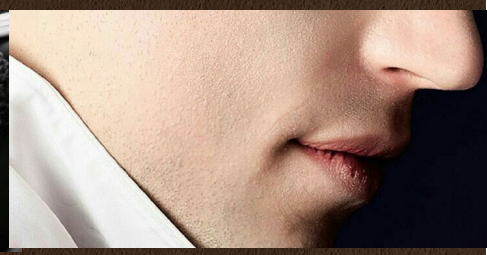

Luce is very immature and aggressive. He relies on his brother to make the decisions where as he brings the brute force. He doesn't care about humans and sometimes chases them for sport on the outskirts of the city. He prefers being in his werewolf form and roams around the darker alleys and abandoned buildings. He prefers being alone, but will often meet up with his brother to talk. Instead of seeing Leben as a possible mate he views her as someone who can join their pack and Luce is the one to suggest that Bones forces her to join the pack, however after witnessing Bones getting increasingly involved with Leben, Luce becomes bitter. Luce goes out of his way to put Leben in her place, keeping her away from Bones. After Leben beats Bones in a fight Luce hunts her and in a rage he fights her with all his might, however she was smarter and he loses. He accepts his defeat. He dislikes Leben, however he respects her as the alpha.

Joseph

Joseph is the head of law enforcement in the city and is secretly a werewolf hunter. He loves his family and has high hopes for his son Roger. He is an honest man and very kind, however due to bad past experience with the Doctor, he is bitter towards him and Leben. After Leben and Roger start spending a considerable amount of time together he starts to accept her. He unknowingly attacks her in her werewolf form and finds out that it was Leben after noticing her fresh wounds the next day. He is furious with himself for trusting her and tries to separate Roger from her, but it doesn't work and Roger is in love with her. He almost watches Leben from a far, he notes that she can't fight and in an attempt to accept her for what she is, and the possibility that she might become future family, he offers to teach her. They become friends, but after Rogers death everything changes, he becomes a dark bitter man, but Leben reaches out to him and helps him as they both mourn. Joseph works with Leben to find out who killed Roger. Leben leaves Joseph a letter explaining that the Doctor did it and that she has takes all the werewolves somewhere else. He sees her as a daughter and mourns her absence as well.

Roger

Roger is a caring and sweet man, is also very intelligent and loves reading. He looks up to the Doctor and respects his father a lot. He is very innocent and steers away from confrontation. An introvert who loves science and books. He is completely thrown off by Leben, a lady with a wild side, she is unlike any lady he has ever met in the city and because Leben is curious and adventurous she is quick to accept all his invitation to walks, dinners and even to his home. Roger loves sharing and Leben loves learning new things and they bond through that. Roger is in love with Leben and even after he learns that she is a werewolf he still loves her and wants to be with her, however after revealing to the doctor that he knows what she is, the Doctor murders him.

Maids

Mary is the head main and acts as an angry old lady that isn't afraid to spank Leben. Penelope and Kathrine are much younger than Mary and work underneath Mary, they are essentially the comedic relief, getting up to antics with Leben.

They teach her how to hunt deer on the outskirts, but she is already fast enough in her human form. They teach her how she needs to kill her prey, but she is capable of doing that in her human form too. Bones is shocked and disturbed and asks Leben what the Doctor made in that laboratory, because Leben surpasses the natural skills of a female werewolf. During a full moon, Bones and Luce are careful with her as she did explain to them that she retains no memory being in her werewolf form. Leben begins her transformation and it is painful and gruesome. She reveals that she never remembered being in this much pain. Leben and the Doctor battle, she struggles in her dazed state. The Doctor admits that he sedated her and had sedated her every night of a full. He goes on saying that he was very angry by how independent she became after running off with the pair of males. Leben is shocked to know the extent the Doctor went to control her.

He reveals that he was the one that sought to kill all female werewolves and that Leben having alpha genes would have the instinct to form a pack and be the alpha. She would be the ultimate alpha werewolf, forcing males to be her underlings and she would listen to the Doctor, giving him control of all werewolves, but Leben became independent and he failed to have her rely on him. Leben's emotions go wild, as she attacks the Doctor with full force, but he fights back even harder... clearly stronger than Bones and Luce.

He is able to subdue Leben and confesses that he is the one that killed Roger. Leben, enraged, attacks the Doctor using everything to her advantage. She opens her jaw prepared to bite off his head, but she hesitates as she remembers how much the Doctor had done for her. The doctor continues to explain that Leben was born with the human face of his daughter and the werewolf face that had taken her away. Leben tosses the Doctor across the room, with enough force that he wouldn't be able to pursue her. Leben flees with Luce, Bones and Sara.

In the end Joseph finds a letter from Leben that explains that the Doctor was the murderer and that Leben has taken her pack somewhere safe and far away. Joseph returns to the manor, now destroyed and empty. The Doctor was nowhere to be found.

THE FUTURE OF WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING;

SEASON 2

After fleeing what seemed to be her happy home, Leben leads Luce, Bones and Sara to a village on the country side, a long way from London. Leben's pack is threatened when she realizes she has found herself in the territory of a pack with eight other werewolves, however the pack's alpha's werewolf form looks eerily similar to Leben's. Leben longs to live a human life again, however the woods call to her werewolf instincts, to be part of nature and to be part of a food chain with other inhuman creatures that inhabit the woods.

Leben has expanded her pack and her territory, however news of her existence has travelled far catching the attention of other powerful creatures, strong monster hunters and even the Doctor that created her. She must become stronger to face her upcoming battles, however she will never be able to kill the Doctor, her creator.

SEASON 3

The monster world and the human world collide, due to the Doctors making himself out to be a god. Leben and her family of werewolves and monsters work together to protect humans and monsters alike by keeping them apart and to stop the Doctor once and for all.
